Residents at the Williams Road Group Home, which houses people with profound developmental disabilities, will now be able to travel around and have greater accessibility after receiving a new wheelchair van from the Greater Vancouver Community Services Society. On hand to celebrate the occasion were the group home's chief operating officer Robin Turnill (left), Jude Evans, who had the honour of cutting the ribbon, Melanie Mendonca, director of community living, resident Sean Hanley with his sister Shannon beside him, and the chief executive officer Ron McLeod.
